Supporting Main Idea with Text Evidence

Passage #1

Native Americans needed a flexible diet to match the many demands of their lifestyle. One way they met this need was by making a food called pemmican, designed for travel and storage. To make it, they dried strips of meat, pounded it into a paste, and then mixed it with fat. Sometimes they added berries and sugar. Then they pressed it into small cakes. Pemmican didn't spoil, and it provided lots of energy.

Additional info

Difference between Mentimeter and Menti

Menti is for participating, Mentimeter is for creating!

For premium users:

- Mentimote → Present normally from your laptop then open Mentimote for the same presentation on your smartphone to turn it into a remote controller of the presentation, set a timer, Q&A and more!
- Integration, such as Miro and PowerPoint Add-in (premium) → connect Mentimeter with existing content to present everything in one place!

Activity

1° step: Create an account and get familiar with the tool: explore the contents and different functionalities (If you need to have something refreshed, just ask!)

2° step: Think about one topic, one lesson that you're gonna deliver to your students next week and build a lesson on Mentimeter.

Suggested structure:

1. Introduction with QR code to share
2. Word cloud (topic brainstorming)
3. Content slides
4. Quiz, ranking, scales...
5. Quotation
